

Development for New Managers

The role of the new manager can be a daunting one! However, effective management is the key to your organisation's success.

Green Ant Consulting offers participative workshops where new and aspiring managers can develop their management skills and knowledge in a supportive forum with other new managers. This can be a highly motivating experience, helping participants to start thinking and behaving from a management perspective.

Each programme will be designed to address your particular needs and current issues. Topics can range from exploring the role of the manager to handling difficult employees.

Our facilitative style encourages self awareness and debate. This ensures that participants remember, 'own' and can apply what they have learned.

Workshops can be designed as one-off events, as part of a longer term programme or short taster sessions.

Our follow-up and evaluation service ensures that you can see how your managers experience real benefits back in the workplace.
